

Robert Lowell Goller, Local Author

Who Put the 'East' in East Aurora?

And Other Chronicles of Our Past

Thursday, October 23 @ 6:30 p.m.

Teens & Adults, 15+

Historian Robert Lowell Goller will discuss his latest book, Who Put the 'East' in East Aurora? This first in a series of books about the history of our region answers more than 30 intriguing questions about East Aurora's past, including why the East Aurora school district is "union free," how Hamlin Park was saved, why East Aurora banned German, how Mambrino King became such a famous horse, and why there's no West Aurora.

A book signing to follow the reading. 10% of the proceeds from the book sales will benefit the Aurora Town Public Library.

Registration is Required

Robert Lowell Goller is a public historian and former journalist who has served as the town and village historian in East Aurora, N.Y., since 2007. Through his books, monthly newspaper column, and weekly livestreams on Facebook and YouTube, he uncovers previously untold stories of the past, placing the history of small towns, such as East Aurora, in the context of national and international events. His television appearances have included C-SPAN and "Sunday Morning" on CBS.

Who Put the 'East' in East Aurora? is his third book. He is also the author of Aurora Revisited (2011) and Legendary Locals of East Aurora (2014).
